

Naloxone Access Guide

Save Lives Oregon partners with organizations to improve the health of people who use drugs, including through distribution of state-funded naloxone and other supplies free of charge to organizations that meet eligibility criteria. Naloxone can also be ordered online with or without a prescription from many online vendors.

Anyone can request naloxone through the Alano Club's Project Red website. Click the "Request Naloxone" button, place an order, and receive free naloxone by mail.

A healthcare provider can send a prescription to a mail-order pharmacy, and the pharmacy will mail it to you.

People in Jackson, Josephine, and Klamath county can order naloxone by mail directly from Max's Mission | Naloxone Training & Distribution.

Vending Machines

Naloxone Vending Machines, like food or beverage vending machines, are an evidence-based public health strategy to increase access naloxone. Naloxone vending machines are legal and can be placed in hospitals, schools, libraries, and other public or private establishments. Here is one example of naloxone vending machine use by a Oregon police department: Clackamas County Sherriff's Office Adds New Vending Machines with Lifesaving Medication.

Online & By Mail

Pharmacies with or without a prescription

Naloxone is available through pharmacies in Oregon. A prescription can be obtained directly from a pharmacist or from another healthcare provider. Naloxone is covered by most insurance with a prescription, at the cost of a co-pay. The Oregon Health Plan/Medicaid provides naloxone for free to its members. It is available in most, if not all pharmacies, and costs ~$45 without a prescription.

Over-the-Counter

Naloxone is now available in stores across Oregon without a prescription.

The FDA approved nasal naloxone over-the-counter medication in 2023. It is available in most, if not all stores that carry over-the-counter medications, and costs ~$45 without a prescription.